

The unknowable, The void – the not-knowable-yet-ness just before knowing-ness sets in before receiving an answer.

Your next step:

Is to acknowledge there is something you do not know ... yet. But don't make the mistake of glibly writing this off with a sweeping generalisation such as "Of course there are things I do not know!" Each time you tap into The unknowable is a poignant opportunity to prove to yourself that your Higher Mind supports you with answers.

The unknown is a most powerful motivator and is the cause of all invention ... along with its friend: 'necessity'. From the unknowable we emerge, even during an 'emergency'. When we admit we don't know what to think, say, or do next; yet remember to ASK our Higher Mind how/what questions – we become masters of our destiny. The author in charge of our reality, which is the positive opposite to unconsciously doing an emotional reaction to our circumstances.

What Area of Life are you focusing on? What do you imagine would be an ideal outcome in this area of your life?

Imagine what you think you may REALLY like to experience, while traversing the unknowable to get there.

Marianne Thorne
CreativeGoalSetting.com